Local Authors Meet Their Readers Celebration Supports Local Library

events and secretary of the Lakewood Memorial Library board of trustees.

Writers Helping Readers

All proceeds of Local Authors Day will be donated to the Lakewood library. A major focus for the day, according to Miller, is to let the public know about the dire funding situation faced by many libraries in Western New York, especially Lakewood. "Libraries provide essential services to the community and must continue to Extra! Extra! Read all about it! Books will take you anywhere, from beyond the rainbow to beyond your imagination, from love to war and from fiction to truth that is even stranger than fiction. Mind reading hasn't been perfected yet, but a book comes pretty close. Each one is worth a thousand pictures in the author's imagination. Local Authors Day will take you there.

Google says there are 130 million different books in the world's libraries, bookstores and home bookshelves. Somebody creative wrote every single one of them. Chautauqua County is especially rich in those fascinating, imaginative and creative people.

Meet the Writers

More than a dozen of the region's best and most successful local authors have decided to create an opportunity next weekend in Lakewood, New York to meet and greet and enjoy a neighborly chat with their readers.

"Buy great local books and meet local authors at their book signings" said Mary Miller, director of the Lakewood Memorial Library. "Promote the amazing writing talent we have in our area."

On Saturday, September 5, 2015 - Labor Day weekend - between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., local writers will be signing books and meeting their readers at the Lakewood Memorial Library, 12 W. Summit St. in Lakewood and at Off The Beaten Path Bookstore, 28 Chautauqua Ave. in the village of Lakewood. They will also have hot dogs, snacks, soda and water for sale, 50/50 drawings and a few fun raffles.

A popular local blues band, A Strange Kind of Sunshine, featuring Chautauqua Lake Idol winner Ben Blood, will provide free, live entertainment from noon until 2 p.m. Blood is also one of the main organizers of the day's change and improve as the needs of the community change. "That is our biggest challenge" Miller said. Though Lakewood is proud of its 30 or more dedicated volunteers, it also has to pay for books, services and upkeep.

"Libraries are evolving," Miller, explained. "They are becoming a different kind of place. We not only have books among our more than 34,000 holdings, we have audio books and e-books, magazines, newspapers, videos, CDs, DVDs and access to a 3D printer. We also offer wi-fi and Internet connected computers, printers a photocopier and fax machine for the public's use."

New Opportunities

Local Authors Day will celebrate not only writing and libraries, but all the new opportunities libraries like Lakewood help create.

The printing press, invented in 1456, changed the world forever. Libraries now have a new kind of printer. Lakewood, for instance, can provide access to

There will also be two chances to win a season ticket for the Southern Tier Xpress Hockey League games. Parking is $5.00. The prize drawing will take place at on the Main Stage just prior to the fireworks show.

Mayor Sam Teresi and the Labor Day Festival Committee have announced that the 36th Annual Greater Jamestown Labor Day Festival will be held Sunday, September 6, 2015, from noon until 9:00 p.m. at Bergman Park. The Greater Jamestown Labor Day Festival is a community celebration designed to honor the labor force of the city and surrounding area, widely recognized as the very best in the nation. All money raised is used to directly fund festival activities and support the host of non-profit community service agencies who participate.

"Get to Bergman Park early Sunday, September 6th. Pick your spot on the lawn in front of the main stage. Get some food. Visit the vendors and crafters. Take the kids to play some games. Then enjoy the biggest fireworks display the region has to offer. The only way is to be right in the middle of all the action," said Jamestown Mayor Samuel Teresi.

Write me some day...

A letter would be nice, or maybe just a note. You know, just about what's going on with you, or how you feel, or what you think of the Yankees' chances this year. Anything.

You know how to write, don't you? After all, if you can't write, you can't read this either, so never mind. But if you're still with me, I'd guess you have been writing, or at least printing, since you were 4 or 5 years old. That's probably a long time.

So congratulations! You are a writer. A lot of people, however, want to be a Writer with a capital W. It is not impossible, but starting with enthusiasm and high hopes is not quite enough.

Comedian Steven Wright once said, "I'm writing a book. I've got the page numbers done." Aspiring writers probably know it takes a bit more than that.

Actually, the rules for becoming a writer are quite simple:

1. Call yourself one
2. Write
3. Never stop until you say something (Estimated time to completion: It could be years.)

Step 3 can be the discouraging one. Here's a one question quiz to see if you have what it takes.

Question: (True or False) Writing is play for you. Words are your toys. You enjoy rearranging them until you create something that never existed before.
Hint: Play can mean the kind of intense pleasure a long distance runner gets while churning out just one more mile, and one more...

Answer: True is the right answer.

Ernest Hemingway once said it was easy, too. "There is nothing to writing," he said, "all you do is sit down at a typewriter and bleed." Make that a word processor and it is still true today.

Forbes contributing blogger, Susannah Breslin, advises us to make it good because, in her view, "Writing is a vow to outlive yourself." Make it something that will last.

Having heard all that, are you still a writer? If it doesn't scare you – better yet, if it sounds like fun – chance are you could be one. Just do Step 3 and you're on the way. The Jamestown Gazette has an invitation for you on page 1 of this edition of the Jamestown Gazette.

On the other hand, if that all just helps you admire good writing a little more, that invitation is for you, too.

Come and meet more than a dozen of Chautauqua County's finest writers this weekend, on Saturday, September 5, at the Lakewood Memorial Library and Off the Beaten Path Bookstore in Lakewood.

They are some of the most creative people around. And they will be delighted to encourage you along the same path, if you want that. And they are just fun to know, too. They each created something that never existed before. Buy their books and support the library there. Maybe they'll save you a place for your book.

So if you don't write me, that's OK too. Just go write something for yourself. You probably have more to say than you think.

And whether it is something you write or your good old Jamestown Gazette, please enjoy the read.

Stated Concord Grape Prices a Mixed Bag for Area Growers

Article Contributed by

Cornell University Jamestown

Concord prices have plunged by as much as $200 per ton in the last two years. As the cash market announces prices for 2015 it appears area growers will now be paid between $150 and $250 per ton. The growth of the wine industry is keeping some market prices at sustainable levels, while the juice and jelly market struggles.

Most Concord grapes produced in the Lake Erie Region are marketed through cooperatives, processors owned by the growers themselves. Everything else is referred to as the cash market, which is yields. Most areas did not observe widespread physical damage that would impact vine health. The region should return to full Concord production by 2016. LERGP also estimates that over 2,000 acres of grapes have temporarily suspended production because of poor market conditions. Proceeds paid to Chautauqua County Concord growers is expected to fall by $13 million dollars, or 42%.

Area grape growers operate on slim profit margins and the decline in farm gate value will directly impact the local economy. To sustain their business, growers will hire fewer employees, invest far less in capital equipment, refinance debt and decrease operating costs. The large majority of impacted people, suppliers, and mortgage holders are all local.

Most commonly consumed fruits among U.S. consumers, 2012

Fruit consumption, including juices has been declining for more than a decade. Grape juice consumption in 2012 had fallen to approximately 2 pints per person..

actually split between annual tonnage contracts, acreage contracts, and a small non-contracted spot market.

For grapes not marketed through cooperatives, area processors must file a stated grape price with NYS Department of Agriculture and Markets. The stated prices must also be distributed to contracted growers prior to August 15th.

We are seeing a perfect storm of declining agricultural commodity prices, slumping demand for juices and jellies, and the closing of local ConAgra processing facilities. Those market realities will now significantly impact the farm gate value of all area producers. Since 2013 the average farm gate value of Concord grapes has fallen from $290 per ton to $212 in 2015. On top of these lower prices the local Concord crop is expected to be average or below average in size. Concord is a variety native to our climate but with winter temperatures falling as low as -30 °F the vines sustained moderate damage. Most damage was limited to primary buds. This type of damage decreases potential crop

It is important to keep in mind that area processors have seen similar declines in their profit margins. To sustain their operations, as the demand for juice and jellies wains, local investment and employment is likely to decline. Further struggles relate to the private label market in general. ConAgra, while no longer located in Chautauqua County, is struggling to manage its portfolio of private label brands in other parts of the country, which continues to impact area growers.

The real impact on the local economy will depend on the length and depth of the low price cycle. The boom and bust cycle of agricultural commodities is nothing new. Industry insiders are concerned that the decline in demand for juices is more permanent. The USDA began to encourage the decreased consumption of sugar-sweetened beverages as it updated its food pyramid to MyPlate. Consumers appear to be incorrectly responding to that advice by reducing consumption of 100% juice products, which are not sugar-sweetened.

Not Your TV

People are not radios, TVs or computers. Those gadgets, and especially the nice people on Mike & Molly or YouTube, don't care if you turn them off. They don't even know it. But real people can tell if you treat them like that. Like not returning phone calls and not showing up for appointments. REALLY? Those are real people you promised a response to. Their time is as important as yours and they generously gave you some of theirs. Remember the word "Polite?" Don't let your TV remote teach you bad people skills.

The Amish and Their History in Chautauqua County

their growing families. "The first group came in 1948 from Ohio and then in 1978 another group came from Middlefield, Ohio and went to Clymer area."

As late as five years ago, there has been another migration from Middlefield, according to Lorenc, with the Amish settling outside of Falconer. In the mean time, the original Cherry Creek, Leon and Conewango community have moved to other parts of the county.

Similar to their simple lifestyle, their version of German also seems to be part of a by-gone age. "It does sound old fashioned. None of these Amish have been back to Germany since the 1700s... they haven't had a connection with the country, or how much the language has changed," Lorenc said. The Amish speak their version of German as their first language and children only learn English as their second language in school.

More than three years ago, I stepped into a van with Carol Lorenc of Amish Flair Tours for a tour of the Amish community of Cherry Creek to see it as she knows it.

Lorenc takes groups of tourists, shoppers and curiosity seekers on an information-filled guided tour through the area inhabited by the old Amish order. Her familiarity with the history, customs and beliefs of the Amish, who are first and foremost her neighbors and friends, is perfect for learning about the normally private group which values its separateness.

On October 18 from 2 to 4 p.m. at a meeting of the Chautauqua County Historical Society at the Cherry Creek Inn, Lorenc will present "The Amish and their History in Chautauqua County."

In Cattaraugus and Chautauqua counties, it is recognized that there are three main Amish settlements - in Conewango Valley, Clymer and outside of Mayville.

According to Lorenc, since arriving in Chautauqua County in 1948, the number of Amish has increased from 30 to 3,000 families. They located here to find good farmland for

"I am always surprised that people don't realize they are living without electricity and still living as they did in the 1800s. However, in areas such as Clymer, they are allowed to have phones in their shops. She says people are surprised, too, that the Amish don't have church buildings. "They are very religious, but have services in their homes and meet every other week as a congregation."

For more information on Carol's talk and the optional Amish-style lunch to follow at the Inn, interested persons may contact the historical society by emailing cchs@mcclurgmuseum.org or call (716) 326 - 2977.

Fresh Garden Veggies

cukes later in the season). Late-summer is the time of year when crops start to produce an over-abundance of goodies on a day to day basis. It is a common sight to see roadside stands touting fresh zucchini...it seems to explode into a riot of green splendor all at once!

Many home gardeners lament about what to do with their sudden bounty, harvesting much more than their own families need; some are very generous and share with their friends and neighbors, while others do indeed set up those roadside stands. However I can come across fresh, home-grown produce, I will jump at the chance to enjoy the delicious flavor that cannot be matched by any grown far away and shipped here. The phrase "fresh is best" really takes on a bolder meaning when you can take something from the garden in the morning and have it on your table for dinner that night!

For those among us not lucky enough (or able to) have our own gardens (or have friends with gardens), all we need to do is look for the nearest Farmer's Market to enjoy the freshest produce around. Here in Jamestown, we are lucky to have several different opportunities to visit Farmer's Markets. I love to wander an open air market and simply inhale the intoxicating fragrance the produce and flowers surround me with. I can always find enough yummy stuff to fill a bag and create a meal to make many a mouth water! Speaking of making my mouth water, I'm about to do that to yours with the recipes that follow! Simply close your eyes and imagine the fragrance that will be coming from my kitchen in a matter of hours...

Can you believe we are already looking at the end of August? Where is the summer going? It seems like just days ago it was June and we were wondering if it was EVER going to stop raining! The dreadfully wet spring lead us all to believe that our summer crops would be less than bountiful. The farmers had a difficult time working their fields just to plant their crops, and then the over-abundance of rain sent the seeds swimming. And yet, here we are, a mere 10 weeks later, and just look at the glorious fields of fresh produce! Nature took over the process (as usual) and has given us a wonderful variety of fruits and veggies just ripe for the picking.

Living within the city limits, I don't have room for a big garden, but I do plant a few tomato and pepper seedlings as well as some herbs each spring. I just love watching my little garden grow, and look forward to those first ripe tomatoes to put on my salad and burgers. There is nothing like the flavor of garden fresh veggies. Some people are lucky enough to have sufficient room for a big home garden (my in-laws always have a beautiful garden; from rhubarb in the spring to summer squashes and

Roasted Ratatouille

Oven 425*

- 1 medium eggplant, trimmed and cut into 1 inch dice
- 1 large sweet onion, peeled and cut into 1 inch dice
- 1 each yellow and red bell pepper, stemmed, seeded, cut into 1 inch dice
- 2 medium zucchini, cut into 1 inch dice
- 12 garlic cloves, halved
- ¼ cup olive oil
- 2 T fresh thyme leaves
- Salt and pepper

Combine eggplant, onion, peppers, zucchini and garlic in a large bowl. Add olive oil, thyme and a sprinkle of salt and pepper; toss to coat. Turn veggies onto a large baking sheet.

Place tray on rack on lowest position in preheated oven. Roast until veggies are golden brown on the bottom, about 20 minutes.

Remove pan from oven, stir in tomatoes and then continue roasting until tomatoes have started to release their juices (about 15 minutes more).

Serve hot, warm or cold, as a side or as an entrée!

Fresh Roasted Corn Salsa

- ½ small onion, diced fine
- 1 jalapeno, diced fine

- Salt and pepper to taste

Thoroughly soak corn in the husk in water for 10-15 minutes. Grill over medium heat until tender (about 15 minutes). Allow corn to cool, remove husk and cut kernels off cob.

In a large bowl, combine corn with all other ingredients, tossing to coat with olive oil and vinegar. Chill well; serve as a dip with tortilla chips or as a condiment with grilled chicken or fish.

Faith Matters Rule Breaker

Contributing Writer

Pastor Scott Hannon

St. John, Lutheran Church Amherst, NY

I'm a rule breaker. I like to break rules. This is especially true when it comes to my ministry.

See, I'm a part of a tradition (Lutheran) that loves things like tradition. We have plenty of rules (a whole book of confessions [beliefs], constitutions and by-laws, etc.). Additionally, we have lots of unwritten rules (thou shalt sit in the back of church, worship shall not exceed 60 minutes, annual meetings shall be accompanied by a potluck supper, etc.). Most of my days are filled with "supposed to's" and most of the time I like to break them. On occasion it gets me in trouble.

"You can't do that!" is a refrain I've gotten used to hearing. As I've grown in pastoral confidence I have developed an eloquent response... "Why not?"

Most church-folk can fill in the rest of the conversation. "We've never done that before." "That's not how we do things around here." "That isn't a part of our tradition." "But we've always done it this way."

This isn't a new conversation in the church world. In fact, it's the opposite. This is the original dilemma facing the church: rule breaking.

See, Jesus and his disciples were always breaking rules. He healed when he wasn't "supposed to." They went where they weren't "supposed to." They ate with people they weren't "supposed to." They ate in ways they weren't "supposed to." Jesus touched people he wasn't "supposed to." He conversed with those he wasn't "supposed to." Again and again in scripture the religious leaders look at Jesus and his followers and shout, "You're not supposed to do that."

Jesus and his disciples' days were filled with "supposed to's" and they continually broke the rules. During one of the many instances in which Jesus ran into trouble for rule breaking he replied to his critics, "You hypocrites. '[You] honor me with your lips, but your hearts are far from me; in vain do you worship me, teaching human precepts as doctrines.' You abandon the commandment of God and hold to human tradition."

Rules are not inherently bad; it's quite the opposite. Rules are good and necessary. However, sometimes they're meant to be broken; especially when they supersede the commandment of God. In the church, we who follow Jesus are called to be somewhat rebellious as we strive to obey not human tradition, but to obey the commandment of our God (that we LOVE one another). So...

Reach out to someone you're not "supposed to."

Break bread with someone you're not "supposed to."

Love your enemy. Give to a stranger.

Forgive again. Hope in the face of despair.

Speak out. Stand up. Make a scene.

Break a few rules.

In the Way,

PSDH

Eleventh Annual Walk 4 Paws

Chautauqua County Humane Society

Team and individual registrations are now open for the 11th annual Walk 4 Paws, presented by the Petco Foundation. This is the Chautauqua County Humane Society's largest fundraiser of the year. The event combines a family friendly 2-mile walk through Chautauqua Institution with charitable giving to help provide care for all the animals awaiting adoption at the shelter.

Walk 4 Paws takes place on October 3 at the Chautauqua Institution Market Gate area. Check-in begins at 9 a.m., with the official walk starting at 10:30 a.m. New this year, at 10 a.m., CCHS will feature a red carpet runway for pets and their owners to show off their finest costumes and/or tricks. This is where the costume contest judging will take place. Awards and complimentary refreshments will follow at the conclusion of the walk.

"This is one of our most exciting events all year," said Jeff Lubi, Executive Director for CCHS. "It's a fun and relaxing event that allows our participants to get their pets involved and help a good cause in the process," said Lubi.

Unlike most charity walks or 5K events, community members walk alongside their favorite pets and get personal sponsors to help raise money for the shelter. As individual walkers' fundraising totals go up, they have the opportunity to earn bigger incentive prizes. The first incentive level gets a commemorative Walk 4 Paws t-shirt and higher incentive levels can earn Keurig coffee makers, bicycles, jewelry, electronic devices and more. Awards will also be given to the best pet costumes voted on by select judges.

Walkers can also form teams for the event.

Interested Team Leaders are encouraged to recruit more people to join their team. The team with the highest combined fundraising total is awarded with a trophy and bragging rights for the year. In 2014, the Flarf's Family team collected $1,955 for the shelter and won the team competition. Ellie Hartnagel won the individual fundraising award by collecting $1,112. Local businesses are encouraged to create teams of walkers for promotional opportunities.

"We are a non-profit organization that receives no funding from the government at any level. Our special events are significant to the shelter and we are very thankful for the community support that we receive each year," said Lubi.

Dogs aren't the only animals that participate in the walk. Over the years, cats, ferrets and even a horse have participated in the event. The event is meant to raise awareness and funds for all animals that enter the humane society facilities.

The Petco Foundation is the presenting sponsor for the event followed by Greater Chautauqua Federal Credit Union and Chautauqua Metal Finishing Supply, Shults Ford Lincoln Hyundai Kia. Media sponsors include The Post-Journal and Media One Group.

The event now features quick online registration and online fundraising tools for teams and individuals at www.spcapets.com. For those interested in fundraising on hard copy materials, registration forms and collection envelopes are available for pick up at the shelter. For more information or to have materials mailed to your home, call 716-665-2209 ext. 213.

The mission of the Chautauqua County Humane Society is to promote the adoption of animals, prevent all forms of animal cruelty and neglect, shelter lost, abandoned and homeless animals, and to provide education about the humane treatment of animals.

THE BRAINS BEHIND SAVING YOURS.™

At this moment, close to 19,000 Chautauqua County residents are grappling with a disease that cannot be prevented, slowed or cured.

It's estimated that about one-quarter of them are coping with dementia caused by Alzheimer's disease, and the remainder are people from their inner circle of family and friends who are providing some kind of care for those with the disease.

In September, steps will be taken—roughly 4,000 of them—to provide the support and programs necessary to help all of those residents.

The Alzheimer's Association Western New York Chapter provides resources across the county for those who have dementia as well as those who provide care. Among those resources:

- Educational programs such as "Family Sensitivity Training", September 24, Fredonia
- Caregiver Support Group Meetings-various times/days each month in Fredonia and Jamestown

These programs are free to attend partly because of donations collected by those who take part in the Chapter's Walk to End Alzheimer's. This year, the Walk will take place on Saturday, September 12, 2015, beginning at 9:00 a.m. Hundreds of participants will gather in Point Gratiot Park in Dunkirk to honor all those impacted by dementia and to take steps to end this disease. Participation by starting or joining a Walk team or making a donation can have a tremendous impact on those efforts. All Walk to End Alzheimer's participants enjoy light refreshments, a souvenir to honor their reason for taking part, and access to basket and 50/50 raffles.

Prendergast Promotes Card Sign-Up Month

Sophia, Gabby and Brionna Dumaine with their grandmother, Shirley Forbes, fill out applications for a library card.

Article Contributed by
James Prendergast Library

September is national Library Card Sign-Up Month, and Prendergast Library is asking area residents to be sure a library card is in their wallet.

"A library card is a ticket to opportunity," said Director Tina Scott.

Honorary chair of this year's Library Card Sign-Up Month is Snoopy, who appears with Charlie Brown and the gang in the comic strip Peanuts and will be in The Peanuts Movie being released this fall. One of his nicknames is the Literary Ace.

"Studies show that children who are read to in the home and who use the library perform better in school, and we're taking the opportunity this month to remind parents that library cards help children succeed," Ms. Scott said.

At Prendergast Library, children under the age of 14 must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian with a photo ID to sign for a permanent library card.

It is also possible for people to register for a temporary ID online that allows them to place holds, download eBooks, eAudiobooks and eMagazines and use the library's online databases for 21 days.

For full access to all library materials, adults can then obtain a free library card at the Circulation Desk by presenting photo ID and proof of current address. For out-of-state residents, cards are only $10 per year.

All patrons, including children, are required to have a current library card in order to access the Internet.

Besides books, Prendergast Library has downloadable audio books, audio books on CD, music CDs, DVDs, eBooks, digital magazines and puzzles for children to borrow, plus computers with educational games for use during library visits.

Children's activities include Puzzle Pals, Lego Club, family games, First Years Storytime for babies and toddlers up to 3 and Early Learning Storytime for ages 3 to 5.

The library is taking sign-ups for a new Minecraft Club that will begin meeting at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 22, for ages 8 to 15.

The Minecraft Club is part of "Back to School with STEM," a project supported by The Blossom Fund administered by the Chautauqua Region Community Foundation. New books about science, technology, engineering and math are also being added to the collection.

For information about getting a library card, visit the library at 509 Cherry St., Jamestown, call 484-7135 or visit the library online at www.prendergastlibrary.org.

That is only one way libraries of today can change the world again in new and previously unimaginable ways. Now that's a community service.

are not only worth borrowing, but also worth owning. It has been said that, "A home without books is a body without a soul."

A book on a subject of special interest can become a personal letter from its author. To get to know the writer and have her or him sign a personal message inside can turn a simple book into a piece

"You can have great ideas but you have to be able to use them," Mary Miller said. Libraries can be a special way to do that.

The Lakewood Memorial Library is part of a system serving nearly a quarter million people in cities, small villages and hamlets scattered across Western New York as a member

New Ideas
"There's an old idea out there that libraries are for people who don't have the money to buy the books," Miller said.
"The new idea says that libraries are places to find out what the world has to offer and what could be that doesn't yet exist. Libraries can now give people access to the world's knowledge in even more ways than a book can."
"We also want to do things for seniors. There are computer applications and services, for instance, which can be tremendously valuable. Seniors and others may have vision challenges that make reading difficult or physical challenges that make writing letters difficult. We have ways to help them and a safe, comfortable place to do that."
Financial support for the Lakewood Library is imperative at this time, according to Miller, especially in light of the continuing upward trend in its daily traffic and lending activities. That is the plan for Local Authors Day and its celebration of reading.

Lakewood is also one of only four member libraries which have contributed digital collections to New York Heritage, a research portal for students, educators, historians, genealogists, and anyone else who is interested in learning more about the people, places and institutions of New York State.

"The Lakewood Library is an outstanding example of what makes the Chautauqua-Cattaraugus Library System so important for our region," according to Tina Scott, director of Jamestown's Prendergast Library which also serves as headquarters for the entire bi-county system.

Labor Day Old and New Again

Article Contributed by
Walt Pickut

the legislature to make it an official holiday in 1887.

So this is the 128th year New York workers will enjoy a special holiday celebrating their skilful "delving and carving" of all the "grandeur we behold."

After 128 celebrations, can't we freshen it up? It's usually a 3-day holiday, so there's time to try out a few ideas.

September has been declared National Chicken Month, National Honey Month and National Better Breakfast Month, along with National Date Nut Bread Day and National Chocolate Milk Shake Day all piled up into the middle of the month. Why not combine all those for a Labor Day Bar-BQ like no one has ever seen before?

To ensure good weather on Labor Day, also celebrate National Neither Rain nor Snow Day at the same time. It commemorates hard working mail carriers and the opening of the New York Post Office building on September 7, 1914. Their motto will help. "Neither snow nor rain, not heat nor gloom of night, stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds." Or Bar-BQs!

Now that's a Labor Day we can all enjoy.

According to historians, Labor Day was first proposed by Peter J. McGuire, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and cofounder of the American Federation of Labor, to honor those "...who from rude nature have delved and carved all the grandeur we behold."

Workers of Chautauqua County may not quite believe they have "...delved and carved all the grandeur we behold," but they have certainly chalked up a long history of hard work and accomplishment worthy to celebrate.

Labor Day also places New York at the center of a controversy among historians (relax, they never have brawls, just nice discussions). Some historians say a different Maguire named Matthew, secretary of the Central Labor Union in New York City, proposed the event first and then appointed a committee to plan a demonstration and picnic for Tuesday, September 5, 1882, in New York City.

New York was also the first state in the union to introduce a bill into

Washington Students Work on School Garden

Article Contributed by
Jamestown Public Schools

Washington Middle School students, Emma Westley, Aliya Graham, Taisha Correa and Erika Amidon used part of their summer break to work in the school garden. The students met every Wednesday with one of the garden club advisors, Jennifer Cronin, Andy Scalise, and Deb Szejbka, to weed, water, and harvest produce that was ripe and ready to eat. The students have picked numerous tomatoes, herbs, peppers, cucumbers, and beans and were thrilled to be able to bring home edibles produced by their hard work.

"Plant life is part of the fifth grade science curriculum, so the garden is a natural real life connection to what is studied in the classroom," said Mrs. Szejbka. "Seeds were planted in small pots using classroom greenhouses, then transplanted into the garden in late May. Tending to the flower/herb beds, and the larger vegetable garden has been an exciting experience for students building responsibility, as well as putting their academic knowledge into practice."

SPORTS with BILL BURK

This and That from the World of Sports

Contributing Writer
Bill Burk

→This from the upcoming 2016 Summer Olympics in Brazil. They want to hold the sailing events on the picturesque Guanabara Bay in the heart of Rio. The only challenge is that the body of water is, by all accounts, a septic tank. According to Sports Illustrated (August 2015), 8,200 liters of raw sewage pour into Guanabara Bay every second (yep, every second) and 100 tons of garbage are dumped there every day. A quick conversion primer; 8,200 liters is just over 2,000 gallons per second which is almost three million gallons a day. One hundred tons is 200,000 pounds, deposited into the body of water they'd like Olympians to splash around in. It's hard enough to picture 200,000 pounds of garbage (roughly the weight of a fully fueled space shuttle, or a blue whale – two things I have admittedly never weighed), but 2,000 gallons of ANYTHING per second challenges the imagination. For instance, the recent mining disaster in Colorado released about three million gallons of toxic wastewater into the river turning it orange, freaking out every environmentalist in the country. Imagine that happening EVERY day with nobody paying much attention. Another way to look at it; it's roughly the equivalent of every person in Celoron (population 1,091) flushing their toilet (1.6 gallons of sewage) into Chautauqua Lake every second of every day. An eco-study that found dangerously high levels of viruses and bacteria from sewage in venues where athletes will compete. They also found evidence of viruses in human waste off Copacabana Beach, where they'd like to host open swim competitions. They are hoping to be able to clear at least the floating debris for the game. I don't want to know what that floating debris is. So, world, how fast can you swim (or sail, or row or kayak) in a HAZMAT suit?

→In March of 2014 the director of The National Labor Relations Board in Chicago ruled that the football players at Northwestern University were effectively school employees and entitled to organize under labor laws. The players met the minimum requirements for employment; they were essentially compensated in tuition, room and board to complete a job and make millions (upon millions) of dollars for the college. Sounds about right to most fair-minded labor supporters. The college and the NCAA, naturally, appealed the decision, not much interested in what a fair-minded labor supporter might think, and terrified to have the covers pulled off their particularly exploitive monopoly on cheap labor for astronomical profits. A few weeks ago the NLRB overturned the historic ruling that Northwestern University football players count not, in fact, form the nation's first college athletes' union, saying the prospect of union and non-union teams could throw off the competitive balance in college football. Why would the NLRB care about the competitive balance in college football? Do they rule the same way for auto workers? It would appear the NLRB has more concern for the competitive balance of a national money-making conglomerate than the people who supply the labor.

→Johnny Manziel isn't throwing this week for the Cleveland Browns because of a sore elbow. Let me ask you this, who was the last professional quarterback that you can remember who had to take a week off with a sore elbow? I can't think of one. And certainly not a back-up quarterback in their second year. I'll ask again, are we sure his nickname isn't Johnny Foosball?

→Since Ted Williams was always recognized as "the greatest living hitter" while he was alive, now that he's dead, why isn't Hank Aaron called "the greatest living hitter"?

→If Wilt Chamberlain averaged 37 points and 27 rebounds as a rookie, and 50/38 a few years later, and once scored 100 points in a game, why is Michael Jordan the best player to ever live??

→A little while ago ESPN made a list of the 100 best baseball players of all time. Arbitrary lists like this are built for guys who hack away at water coolers, bar stools, and weekly sports articles. Roger Clemens is the first pitcher at number seven, Walter Johnson is at twelve and Greg Maddux is thirteen (Babe Ruth is number one by the way). Check out their stats below.

Can we all agree never to have a list of baseball pitchers that doesn't have Cy Young first? I'd appreciate it.

Dozens of Experiences Fill Colors of Chautauqua Season

Music and Wine at 21 Brix Winery and an Evening of Harvest Wine and Craft Beer at the Grape Discovery Center are two experiences scheduled during the Colors of Chautauqua.

Visitors Bureau

The Chautauqua County Visitors Bureau in western New York State announces the schedule for the Colors of Chautauqua, a season of foliage, festivals and learning. The fall event is promoted in the tradition of lifelong learning popularized by Chautauqua Institution more than 141 years ago. Visitors as well as residents can register for entertaining classes and learn kitchen, gardening, and foraging techniques, take lessons in creating artwork and crafts, join guided walking tours, discover history through storytelling, and expand their knowledge of local foods, wine, and beer. From Labor Day Weekend through Veteran's Day, the schedule includes dozens of learning experiences that take place in both indoor and outdoor settings across Chautauqua County.

Fall workshops showcase popular seasonal themes of the harvest, the brilliant landscape, and the heritage of the region. Participants might take a horse-drawn wagon ride through a historic cemetery where notable people like Lucille Ball and BF Goodrich are buried. Knowledgeable guides, some in costume, will relate a dozen stories of people buried there. Other workshop participants might learn to can fruit and local produce or forage for mushrooms. Area farmers, chefs, winemakers and brewers will share their knowledge of local foods, wines and brews in a variety of experiences from a Farm-to-Table Dinner at the Athenaeum Hotel's Heirloom Restaurant to an Evening of Harvest Wines and Craft Beer at the Grape Discovery Center in Westfield. Many experiences are presented as tours or talks. The Lifelong Learning Center at SUNY Fredonia will offer a tour and lunch in Amish country.

In addition to learning experiences, the autumn schedule in Chautauqua County is abundant with harvest festivals every weekend through November. The Village of Silver Creek celebrates its annual Festival of Grapes, September 17-20 while the Town of Busti honors all the many uses and flavors of apples on September 27th. Peek'n Peak Resort near Findley Lake toasts the changing of the seasons over two weekends, October 10-11 and 17-18 with their Annual Fall Fest. Festivities include an exceptional juried craft show, ski lift rides, and snow sports equipment swap. Wineries from Silver Creek, NY to North East, PA will share their favorite harvest recipes paired with wine during Lake Erie Wine Country's two Harvest Wine Weekends in November.

The word Chautauqua evokes a place where people go to learn while having fun, a place to vacation with the opportunity for personal growth. For well over a century, visitors and residents of Chautauqua County have been gathering at lakeside assemblies and summer camps, attending lectures and cultural performances, and relaxing on one of several lakes. This historic retreat atmosphere is preserved in the Chautauqua region today, with the addition of progressively new learning adventures. The Chautauqua in Spring and Colors of Chautauqua seasons highlight these new learning opportunities, many of which can be found throughout the year.

The Colors of Chautauqua season is promoted by the Chautauqua County Visitors Bureau and held in collaboration with area tourism partners and attractions. Chautauqua County is located in the southwestern corner of New York State with New York's largest grape growing region, five lakes, Historic Districts, Amish communities, and Lucille Ball's hometown of Jamestown. For more information and a schedule of vacation learning events during the Colors of Chautauqua as well as throughout the year, call 1-866-908-4569 or visit the Chautauqua County Visitors Bureau website at www.tourchautauqua.com.

Jamestown Veterinary Hospital

*Article Contributed by

Who could be on a dog's best friend list besides his or her owners? Chances are it's the local veterinarian. Jamestown Veterinary Hospital (JVH) is one of many busy animal hospitals in the area. Located at 236 Fluvanna Avenue, the handsome, red brick building includes animal kennels for overnight stays and a home where Chief of Staff Dr. William Seleen, DVM, used to live. Now living on Chautauqua Lake, he is easing his way into retirement after 37 years.

"We are now part of a large corporation," he explained. But he says that it is still hard to cut down on his hours. Dr. Seleen trains staff as he performs surgeries on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. He is also a certified wildlife rehabilitator. He sees birds, raptors and exotics, including Liberty, Jamestown Audubon Society's resident bald eagle. "I also help with surgeries Mondays and Wednesdays when needed. I started taking Fridays off at the end of December."

Dr. Seleen works with 15 staff and two other veterinarians, Dr. Melissa Schrope, DVM, a native of Warren, PA. and Dr. Jessica Wilkins, DVM, a native of Chautauqua County. The hospital is open six days a week and offers boarding and educational services to patrons. All are listed on the website, <http://www.jamestownvethospital.com/>.

Entering the quiet hospital waiting room with an animal, one doesn't see the treatment rooms. One recent visitor, on entering the treatment area, saw a very large, red Irish Setter laying on a table surrounded by staff. One of the veterinarians showed Dr. Seleen the digital x-ray picture of his leg on their computer screen. They discussed the injury and began treatment based on what they saw.

Jamestown Veterinary Hospital also uses ultrasound regularly. "We base our work on the new ultrasound textbook published by Dr. Gregory Lisciandro [Focused Ultrasound Techniques for the Small Animal Practitioner, Gregory R. Lisciandro (Editor)]. Lisciandro is also a Jamestown native. "We took his workshop and I recommend it to other veterinarians in the area," Seleen said. "We didn't have any of this in 1978 when I was starting out," he added.

Dr. Seleen learned surgical procedures while interning at Colorado State University. "They were short staffed, so I got to do a lot of surgical procedures," he said. "They took videos of complete surgeries, including heart and brain, for us to watch before first practicing them.

I worked with a vet who put the first pin in a dog's leg," he recalled, smiling. He said in those days a veterinarian needed to know five different ways of doing surgeries and medicine. "If one doesn't work out, you need to try another." They had no specialists at that time. "They were just beginning to develop specialty programs the year I graduated," he said. He later counted on the expertise of veterinarians and professors he knew from Vet school when he had complicated cases in his own practice.

"There were no computers or word processors at that time." They had no electronics or machines to help diagnose illnesses and injuries, either. "We had a limited amount of data when diagnosing, back then." Working in other practices, previously, he hadn't been allowed to perform any diagnostic procedure, so he decided to open his own practice.

Dr. Seleen began his practice in 1978. He purchased his practice from Jim Olson, son of the late Dr. Mary Koenig, who was one of the first women in the area to become a veterinarian. "She married Ray Olson, a tool and dye maker," he said, "who later went to veterinary school. He used his tool and dye skills to make surgical tools for orthopedics and surgery." They had started the practice in 1933 in a large barn. "It burned down in 1969, and they built this building ( the present Fluvanna Avenue location) with a home attached," he said. He added that Dr. Olson had been a talented carpenter and renovated all the cabinets in the building before his son sold it.

"In the beginning, we had only three people in the office," Seleen said. His wife, Linda, was his office manager. "And she was a great manager," he said. He worked every day of the week and did house calls too. "We lived in the attached house," he said, "so it was convenient. We even celebrated holidays and had reunions there."

Today, even office practices have changed. "We began recycling cardboard about 10 years ago," said Kimberlee Blake, Hospital Manager, who has worked with Dr. Seleen for 36 years. Outside the current building, visitors to the clinic can see dumpsters labeled cardboard, plastic, cans and glass to recycle all materials used for medicine and surgery. "It's important," Blake said. "One of our staff is so committed to it; she has a recycling image tattooed on her arm. If we accidentally throw away a recyclable she catches it," Blake said.

Jamestown Veterinary Hospital is located at 236 Fluvanna Avenue in Jamestown. Pet owners are invited to call 716.664.4204 for an appointment and bring their best friends to meet the vets.

New Beginnings Family Restaurant

Anyone looking for an excellent meal, a good cup of coffee and friendly conversation need not look any further than New Beginnings Family Restaurant in Sugar Grove, PA.

New Beginnings is a family restaurant in every sense of the word. Larry and Sue Cole own New Beginnings, while their daughter and son-in-law, Cheryl and Jeff Chase, manage the restaurant. To make New Beginnings truly a family affair, daughter Michelle Menetti of Youngsville helps with the clerical duties.

New Beginnings has already had quite a history. The Chases had been working at the Sugar Shack – in the same building where New Beginnings is now – when they decided to head north and open their own restaurant. They called it New Beginnings because of their own new beginning.

Larry had just retired from R.E. Michael Co. of Jamestown while Sue was working at the Rouse Estate in Youngsville as a restorative aide. Larry assisted his daughter and son-in-law with the books for the restaurant, and before he knew it, he and Sue bought the place.

"The restaurant started in September 2010 at its original location in Busti," said Larry. "My daughter and son-in-law actually started the restaurant. We wound up buying the restaurant from them. I was retired and looking for something to do. I wouldn't have taken it over if it hadn't been for Jeff. He's an excellent cook and an excellent leader."

The Coles opened their current location at 3 Main St. in Sugar Grove, PA in January 2013. The location was just as familiar for Larry and Sue as it was as their daughter and son-in-law. Prior to the site being the Sugar Shack, where Cheryl and Jeff previously worked, but the former Sugar Bowl Lanes, where Larry and Sue used to bowl.

"This was originally a bowling alley," Sue said. "We're sitting on Lane 8. One of the reasons we know so many people is because Larry and I bowled here."

Larry said that the fish fries held Wednesday through Saturday are likely their most popular meal. And while they also have prime rib and pot roast specials twice a month, Sue said that Jeff will make just about anything, and a lot of it. She said that the portions are large – sometimes almost too large – and word has gotten around.

"We have people coming from miles around," Sue said. "A man from Japan took pictures of the front of the building and his plate. He put it online with a review but it was in Japanese. I hope he said something nice."

"If you walk away hungry, it's your own fault," Larry added.

New Beginnings also has several themed rooms, such as the "Ocean Room" and the "Horse Room." The "Patriot Room" has decorations and photos dedicated to our country's military and first responders, and free meals on Veterans Day for those who have served our nation.

"From morning until night. Anything they want," Larry said.

New Beginnings is located at 3 Main St. in Sugar Grove, PA. For more information, please call (814) 489-7474 or just stop in.

The Jamestown Gazette is proud to recognize our dealers, outstanding corporate citizens of our county. This week, the Gazette especially thanks New Beginnings for the faithfully carrying The Jamestown Gazette, The People's Paper, for the benefit of their customers, our readers.

Nature Center Leading Stroller Walks

Article Contributed by
Audubon Nature Center

The Audubon Nature Center is offering a special opportunity for you to take your baby on a stroll to explore the sights, sounds and smells of nature, while you get to spend time with other adults.

On the first three Thursday mornings in September – September 3, 10 and 17 – Nature Center Senior Naturalist Jeff Tome will lead walks on the Warren-North Warren Bike Trail for anyone who brings a young one in a stroller. The outings will begin at 10 a.m. and last for an hour.

Babies need stimulation. They love to look at new things, explore, and have fun with their favorite grown-ups. This walk will be full of new ways to explore things outside. You can meander up the bike trail while learning what plants babies like to smell, feel, and play with as you go.

The father of two, Tome has used outings along the bike trail and other places as a way to get his children to play creatively, sleep deeply, and be more observant.

Participants will meet at the East Street parking area of the Warren-North Warren Bike Trail. To reach that location, go east off Market Street (Route 62) onto 5th Avenue, then turn left on East Street and go to the end of the road.

Remember to bring a child in a stroller, everything they need, and wear comfortable walking shoes.

The fee for each walk is $8, $6 for Friends of the Nature Center and children 3-15, and free for children two and under. Space is limited.

Reservations are required by the Monday prior to each walk. Call (716) 569-2345 during business hours or use the online form by clicking on "Warren Stroller Walks" at www.jamestownaudubon.org. If you are not pre-paying at the time of registration, please bring exact change.

The Audubon Nature Center is at 1600 Riverside Road, one-quarter mile east of Route 62 between Jamestown, New York, and Warren, Pennsylvania.

To learn more about the Nature Center and its many programs, call (716) 569-2345 or visit www.jamestownaudubon.org.
